The Identity exhibit examines three aspects of my identity: ___________________, _______________ and _______________.

How else could I divide up parts of my identity? [Choose one.]
_______________, _______________ and _______________.
_______________ and _______________________.

Check out my fingerprints!
[Draw and label the different kinds of patterns.] →

[Compare prints with a friend.]
Do we have any similar patterns? □ YES! □ NO!
Would I be (circle one):
more likely / just as likely / less likely to match with a family member?

[Stand under a few of the Personality Tubes.] Do any of the voices sound like me? Here are a few words I would use to describe MY personality:

[Try a few of the computer "tests" in the exhibit. Circle all that apply.]
I have a more female / more male / equally female and male brain.
I am more of an introvert / extrovert / both.
I am more of a traditionalist / innovator / both.
I am more wired / relaxed / both.

Do I agree with these tests? Why or why not?
Do I have a very broad network of loosely-connected people or a smaller, tightly-knit network? What might be the pros and cons of each?

Example Sociogram

Try the “Who are You Now?” display. Do I talk to my friends differently than I do my family? My teacher? [Observe others in the exhibit.] Here are three different kinds of body language I see:

1.
2.
3.

Check all that apply:
I tried the ☐ “Is Your Face Symmetrical?“ ☐ “Your Future Self”
☐ “Imagine Yourself as a Different Ethnicity” displays.

What is it like to see my face differently?

How might I act differently if I looked this way today?

How might I be treated differently?
